

Three years ago Kate left an abusive relationship

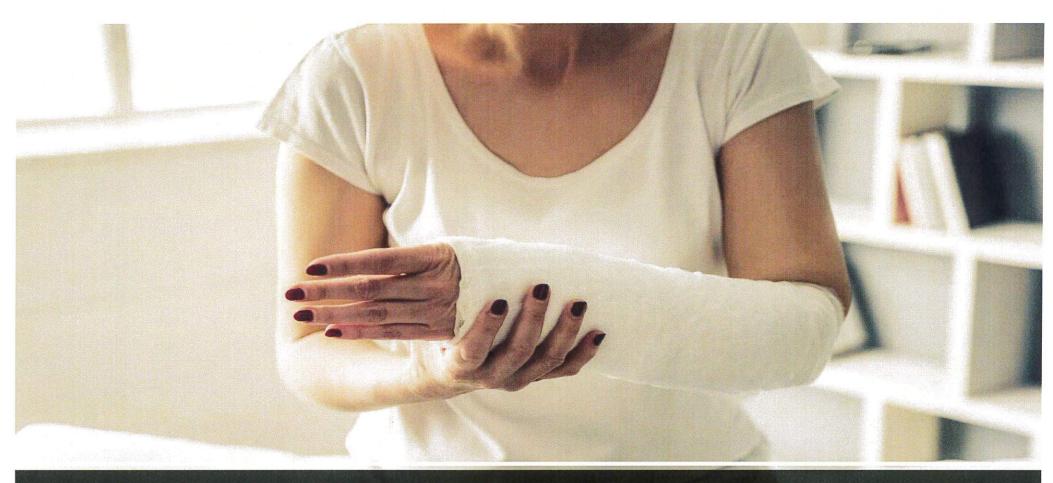

Moving cities Kate found a part-time job with flexible hours

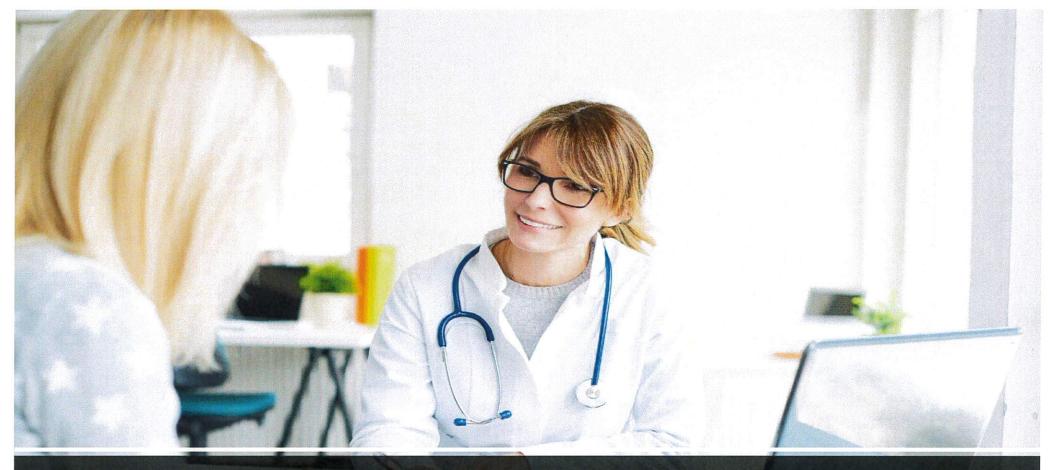

TEM

But on a low wage Kate struggled to make ends meet

On her way to work, Kate slipped on the ice

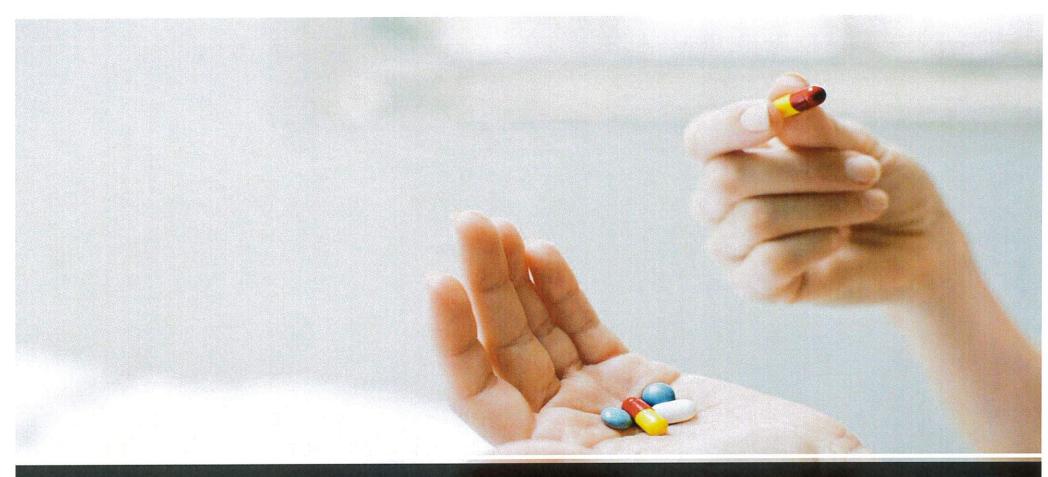

Opiates helped Kate manage the pain until they ran out

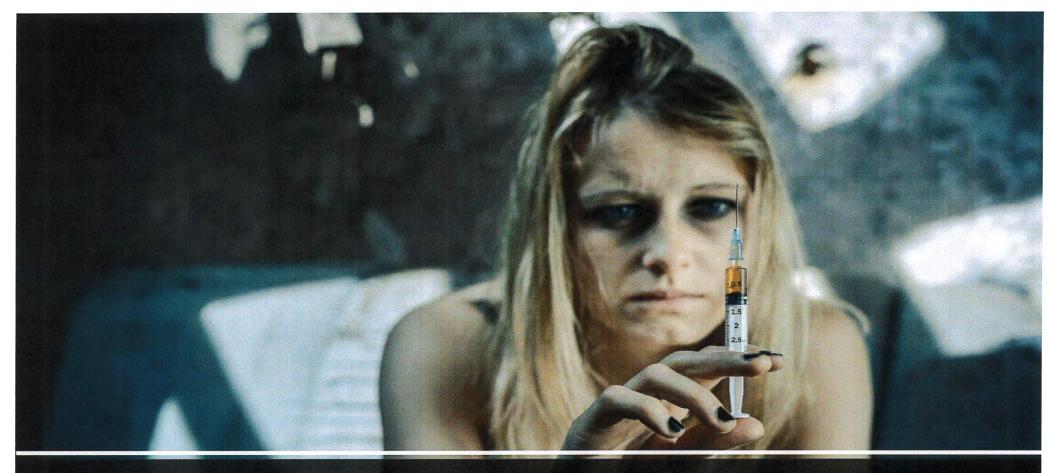

Withdrawal intensified Kate's unaddressed anxiety

Finding a new prescriber, Kate took more and more pills

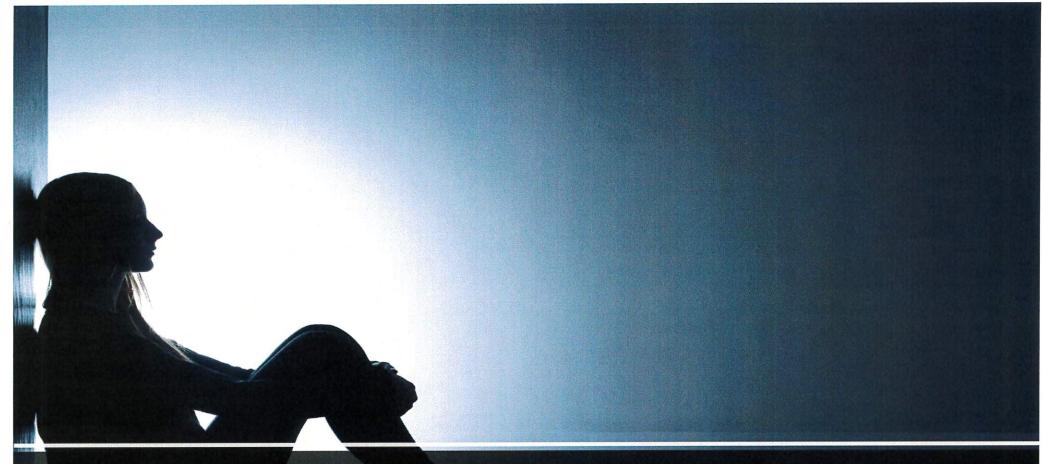

Until only heroine took care of her pain

One day the police stopped her while high. Kate was arrested...

Kate lost her job and her kids were taken into care

Unaware of her reduced tolerance, Kate accidently overdosed

III.

How can Kate's tragedy be avoided?

South Carolina offers a wealth of support, but in silos...

Gov Administrator:Processed Kate's forms for state help

Physician 1: Prescribed T3s to alleviate her pain but later refused a refill

Coworker: Referred Kate to her doctor after noticing Kate's anxiety and fidgeting

Physician 2: Continued to prescribe Kate T3s without monitoring her tolerance

Police Officer:
Pulled Kate over and noticed she was high and arrested her

Social Worker: Removed Kate's children and placed them in foster care

3 fundamental challenges need to be overcome

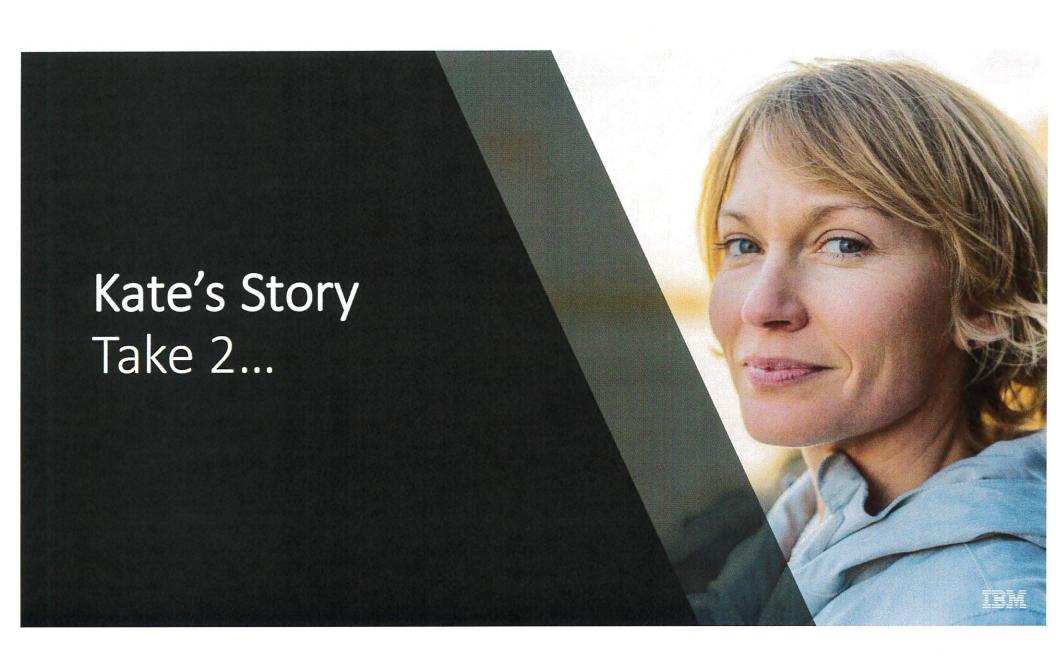

1. Limited information about the Client

2. Lack of actionable insights of the Client's needs

3. Restricted agility to holistically respond to Client's needs
