Exclusive and concurrent jurisdiction is conferred on this Court by the SC General Assembly. The Family Court has exclusive jurisdiction over all matters involving family relationships including actions for separate support and maintenance, divorce, alimony, custody, visitation, child support, adoption, termination of parental rights, division of marital assets and debts, name changes, juvenile truancy and criminal matters and cases involving the abuse and neglect of minor children and vulnerable adults.

- (c) Lancaster County Adult Drug Court

19. If the answer to question 18 is yes, describe or list five of your most significant orders or opinions and give the citations if they were reported. Also, list citations to any appellate review of these orders or opinions.

The only Orders issued from Drug Court are bench form Orders. Five of my most significant Family Court Orders are;

- (a) South Carolina Department of Social Services vs. Boulware, 422 S.C. 1, 809 S.E.2d 223 (2018). This case is significant because it clarified the issue of standing to pursue a private action for adoption of children in the care of the Department of Social Services. To attain standing, the person who petitions for adoption must first be a resident of South Carolina. Second, the child must not have been placed by the Department of Social Services for adoption at the commencement of the adoption action. The South Carolina Supreme Court reversed the decision of the Court of Appeals and remanded the case to the Family Court to proceed with Petitioners' action for adoption.

- (b) Stradford vs. Wilson, 378 S.C. 301, 662 S.E.2d 491 (Ct. App. 2008). This was a case that I tried as an attorney but it remains a significant order. I have used the findings and legal arguments in deciding cases involving the name change of minor children. The parties to this action were not married. Father petitioned the Court to change the child's surname to the name of his family. The Court determined that both parents have an equal interest in a child bearing their respective surname. The Court held that the party attempting to change the child's name must establish by a preponderance of the evidence that the name change is in the child's best interests. The Court further enumerated the factors to consider when making a determination as to whether the name change is in the child's best interest.
- (c) Sherrie Storey vs. Scott Souza, 2011-DR-43-1390. The case was a contested custody case involving two fit parents. Each party possessed strengths and characteristics that would be beneficial to the growth and development of the children. Each parent had the ability to provide for the children financially, physically, emotionally and spiritually. This case is significant in that it is representative of the difficulty faced by Family Court judges in crafting decisions that serve the best interest of the children, allow the children to spend quality time with both parents and provide the children with a somewhat normal life routine. Contested custody cases are always difficult for children, litigants, lawyers and judges.
- (d) Kristen and Jesse Anderson vs. Justin Haile, 2018-DR-29-256. This matter involved a request to terminate the parental rights of the Defendant (Plaintiff's ex-husband and biological father of the children) and a request to adopt by the stepfather (Plaintiff's husband). Cases involving the termination of the relationship between a parent and child are some of the most difficult cases that a Family Court judge is called upon to hear and render a decision. The judge may order a termination of parental rights only after making two findings based upon clear and convincing evidence. First, the judge must find that one or more legal grounds exists for termination. Secondly, the judge must find that the termination of parental rights is in the best interest of the minor child. This case is significant because the Court found by clear and convincing evidence that a legal ground existed for the termination of the Defendant's parental rights. (Failure to visit in excess of six months) However, the Court did not find clear and convincing evidence that best interest of the minor children would be served by terminating the Defendant's parental rights. The Defendant, while struggling with the break-up of his marriage, the effects of two combat military tours and undiagnosed PTSD, believed it was in the children's best interest to stop his physical contact with them. The Defendant, however, never stopped loving his children, supporting his children financially or trying to become a better person for them. Defendant was willing and able to provide for the needs of the children. In addition, keeping the father's rights intact did not affect the children's quality of life, disrupt their current stability or interfere with their relationship with their father, stepfather or extended families.

(e) Sheryl B. Broome vs. Barry S. Broome, 2019-DR-46-794. This was an action for divorce. The parties in this matter had been married for 32 years and the issues before the Court were divorce, equitable distribution of debts and property, alimony and attorney fees. This case is significant in that it is representative of the process used in making decisions with regards to the equitable distribution determination, the award of alimony and the award of attorney fees.

As a parent, community partner, teacher, lawyer and judge, I have seen how decisions made in Family Court affect the lives of litigants, families and friends. I have dealt with clients in distress and turmoil. I have experienced the stress and pressures of a Family Court practitioner. As a judge, I hope to never lose sight of the emotions of litigants, the pressures of Family Court practitioners and the importance of each and every decision made in Family Court. Each day I attempt to behave in a way that facilitates conflict resolutions and not in a fashion that spurs emotional strife. I am courteous to litigants, lawyers and court personnel. I am attentive during hearings, well versed in the law and render decisions in a timely fashion. I try to remember that what is routine and common to me as a regular participant in Family Court is new and terrifying to most litigants and witnesses. I hope to be viewed as a judge who uses her gut, heart and head to render good, just and fair decisions. I hope that litigants and lawyers leave the courtroom feeling their stories were heard, their positions considered and they were treated with respect in the resolution of their disputes.
