Fiscal Impact Summary

This bill expands paid parental leave for eligible state employees from six weeks to twelve weeks for the birth of a child and from two weeks to four weeks for a co-parent after the birth of a child or for fostering a child from state custody pursuant to §8-11-150. The bill redefines eligible state employee in this section to specify that all full-time employees are eligible for parental leave, including those employed by a four-year or postgraduate state institution of higher learning or state technical college. Currently, eligible employee is defined as an employee occupying any percentage of a full-time equivalent position. The Division of State Human Resources (DSHR) within the Department of Administration (Admin) reports that this change will extend the paid leave to time-limited and temporary grant positions. Lastly, the bill increases the paid leave for the adoption of a child from six weeks to twelve weeks for the primary caregiver and from two weeks to four weeks for a parent who is not the primary caregiver pursuant to §8-11-155.

State agencies and institutions may face additional personnel needs associated with managing the workload from employees taking twelve or four weeks of leave and as such, may experience an increase in expenditures if it is necessary to hire temporary employees or offer current employees a temporary salary increase to manage the workload. Further, under the bill, employees would not be required to use accrued sick and annual leave for these additional weeks and instead may use the additional paid parental leave for qualifying events. As such, agencies may experience an increase in expenses resulting from employees accruing additional leave if an employee separates from covered employment. However, as this will vary by agency and institution, the impact of this bill is undetermined.

This bill is not expected to have an expenditure impact on DSHR, as the management of the change is expected to take place under normal agency operations.

Explanation of Fiscal Impact

State Expenditure

eligible state employee in this section to specify that all full-time employees are eligible for parental leave, including those employed by a four-year or postgraduate state institution of higher learning or state technical college. Currently, eligible employee is defined as an employee occupying any percentage of a full-time equivalent position. DSHR reports that this change to the definition would extend parental leave to time-limited and temporary grant employees. Lastly, the bill increases the paid leave for the adoption of a child from six weeks to twelve weeks for the primary caregiver and from two weeks to four weeks for a parent who is not the primary caregiver pursuant to §8-11-155.

DSHR reports that 958 state employees utilized paid parental leave in 2024 for the birth or placement of a child. State agencies expend appropriated funds for employee salaries when an employee is at work or on paid leave. Under this legislation, employees would not be required to use accrued sick and annual leave or unpaid leave available under the federal Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA) and instead would use the additional paid parental leave for qualifying events. This would allow employees to retain an additional six or two weeks of accrued leave they may have otherwise used. Agencies and institutions may face additional personnel needs associated with managing the workload of employees taking additional weeks of leave. As such, agencies and institutions may experience an increase in expenditures if it is necessary to hire temporary employees or offer current employees a temporary salary increase to manage the workload resulting from an increase in available leave under the bill.

When an employee separates from state employment, they forfeit accrued sick leave but are paid up to 45 days of unused annual leave. With the additional paid parental leave provided by the bill, employees would retain annual leave that may have otherwise been used. As such, agencies may experience an increase in expenses resulting from leave payout to employees accruing additional leave if an employee separates from covered employment. DSHR reports that in FY 2023-24, of the 958 employees who used paid parental leave, 112 separated from employment immediately thereafter, 94 of which were owed annual leave payout in the total amount of $139,457. Of the 94 employees, 2 had accrued the maximum annual leave carryforward amount of 45 days.

The total impact of this bill will vary depending on the number of employees that use parental leave, the average salary of those who take parental leave, the ability for the agency or institution to manage the workload while employees are using the additional parental leave, and whether this causes more employees to separate from employment. As this will vary widely by agency and institution, the impact of this bill is undetermined.

The bill's expansion of paid family leave currently administered by DSHR is not expected to have an expenditure impact on Admin, as the management of the change is expected to take place under normal agency operations.
